

October 3, 2006

2006 Alberta Business Award of Distinction gives Chevron an edge

The Chevron Way is also the ethical way, and the company has a prestigious award to show prospective employees a principled approach is embedded in every aspect of its operations.

Chevron Canada Resources was the 2006 recipient of the Ethics in Business Award of Distinction, sponsored by the Certified Management Accountants of Alberta and the Alberta Chambers of Commerce.

Spokesperson Lorelei Piotto says the award meant a lot to Chevron's employees who were proud their everyday work standards of honesty and integrity met the strict criteria of the judges.

"The award is something we point to as evidence of how Chevron behaves, not just in Canada but, really, all over the world," says Piotto. "We really take this seriously."

As the company gears up for campus recruitment, Piotto says it will point proudly to the Ethics Award of Distinction.

"It gives potential new candidates confidence in coming to work for Chevron," she notes. "I think it differentiates us from our competitors."

The Alberta Chambers of Commerce, which hosts the annual Alberta Business Awards of Distinction, believes in the importance of ethical practices. In an effort to stress the need to set high standards, Allan Wachowich, Chief Justice of the Alberta Court of Queen's Bench, will give a briefing at the 2007 awards gala in February. His topic is Business Ethics: The Buck Stops Somewhere.

The Alberta Chambers of Commerce is now accepting nominations for the 2007 Alberta Business Awards of Distinction, which features 15 categories. The deadline is Nov. 14, 2006.

To learn more about the Alberta Business Awards of Distinction and take advantage of its convenient online nomination forms, visit www.abbusinessawards.ca.

The Alberta Chambers of Commerce is a federation of 127 Community Chambers of Commerce, which in turn represent 22,000 businesses.

- 30 -

For further information, please contact:

Tracy Elofson, Manager Events
Alberta Chambers of Commerce
1.800.272.8854 Ext. 2

Lorelei Piotto
Chevron Canada Resources
403.234.5650